The Gradlhof

The Gradlhof arose as a result of changings in the wild-animal husbandry of Helmut Gradl. Through the restrictive regulation of wild-animal import and export, like bison and aurochs, the main business of breed became increasingly difficult. For this reason, Helmut Gradl decided no longer to deliver the animals into wild parks, nature reserves and zoos, but rather to give the organic-meat to the regional people. To this ned, the construction of the main building with EU-slaughterhouse startet. According to this decision further construction projects followed, starting with the conversion of the lower stable to a small but steadily growing pub, a pump room and two more stables. The two more stables were used for the agriculture and the accomodation of the animals of the petting zoo, while the pump room safes the supply of own, fresh groundwater. Our water is constantly verified parallel to the regional analyses and is showing outstanding good grades of mineral content and structure. It doesn't matter which tap you open on Gradlhof, you can be sure that you are doing something good for your skin and your body.

Our animals & our meat

Fallow deer

The Romans, from the Middle East and Asia Minor introduced the fallow deer, which is bigger than the usual deer. The animals with the characteristic spotted fur have a more tender meat than deer; it's juicy and lean at the same time. You can create a numerous, tasty dishes from the shoulder, leg and back despite the high protein content (22%), it is very low in fat (2%). The mineral content (zinc, phosphorus, iron, potassium etc.) of the fibrous meat distinguish it as beneficial to health.

Bison

The bison, originally located in the wide lawns of North America, grazes nearby our yard in the village Kislbach. They are living outside in the whole year and are only fed with hay bales from our lawns in the winter. This wild living cattle breed is the high point of our organic-meat assortment. Due to the natural way of keeping and the quality of our green spaces, the meat develops its typically strong and spicy aroma. The slow growth of our cattle ensures lean meat with low fat deposits. Not only athletes know about the special advantages of beef, it is particularly rich in minerals (selenium, protein, iron, zinc), essential amino acids and vitamin B. The composition ensures, among other things, a healthy nervous system and improved muscle regeneration, as well as a balanced carbohydrate and energy metabolism.

Aurochs

Similar to the bison, the aurochs is a wild-cattle with long history and mythology. The aurochs type and the old cattle isn't receive in the original way, rather a laborious back-breeding. However, there are many advantages of the meat; it has many vitamins and omega-3 fatty acids. Moreover, it is distinguished by the intensive taste and dark red color. The short-grain, aromatic meat is grown naturally and finely marbled.

Water buffalo

The well-known water buffalo grazes in the pasture directly in front of our yard, the main food consists of grass, herbs and aquatic plants. The meat of the water buffalo contains twice as much iron and significantly less fat than normal beef. The wild taste comes from the delicate consistency and the nutty aroma.
